Securing The Falkland Plain

Your family has recently discovered a great wealth of pearl bearing clams in the Falkland Plain. It is unfortunate that the land is under dispute in the treaty discussions tonight. It is part of why you agreed to attend the Neptune Ball. You intend to secure this land for Atlantica. Your family will have no trouble monopolizing the land once it is secure.

To accomplish this, you will have to figure out why the Pacificans care so damn much about the land – surely they don’t know about the pearls? Go and make at least 2 Pacificans tell you why the Falkland Plain is so important to them. Once you do so, turn to page 2.

The only thing worse than fighting someone who is in it for the money, is fighting someone who is in it for moral reasons. They never know when to quit. Unfortunately, it looks like the Pacificans are after the Falkland Plain for moral reasons. Their precious Kraken was supposedly sighted there, not so long ago.

You will need to contact your family and make sure that they are up for this fight. You may have to burn a lot of political capital and take some major risks to pull this off. Write a note to your family (clearly mark the note as an “in game” item) and deliver it to the nearest page (NPC) who will deliver it to your family. In 20 minutes, you may go inquire with a page as to the response. Once you have A Letter from the Aquilino Family (321), turn to page 3.

Your family has of course written to you in code, just in case the letter was intercepted. The letter indicates that the land is of great importance to your family, and they are more than willing to take the risks involved with securing the land.

Well, if they are determined, then you'd better set things in motion. First thing's first, talk to Claudia and convince her, head of the Explorer's Guild, to make a formal (written) declaration that the Explorer's Guild will veto any treaty that does not secure the Falkland Plain for Atlantica. If she is currently indisposed, or refuses to cooperate, you may forge such a document yourself. Be careful though, if you are caught forging Claudia's signature, the dungeons will be the least of your worries. Once you have the real or forged document in hand, turn to page 4.

Now to convince the King. Present the document to King Triton. Make it very clear to him that the Explorer's Guild is a crucial part of these negotiations and that he cannot afford to ignore your demands. Use this fact throughout the evening to delay the treaty if you haven't completed your research and the treaty doesn't give you what you want. Once you have presented the document to Triton, turn to page 5.

Jade was a Pacifican princess. Interesting. You're beginning to remember something you heard long ago from an old storyteller - Jade definitely had something to do with the start of the war. The pieces are starting to come together for you - but you'll need a rare Pacifican text to prove it to Jared.

Luckily the Assassin's Guild has contacts in the city beyond the palace that almost certainly have a copy of the scroll you need. Handwrite a request for "An old, fragile scroll (661)" (marking it as an in game item), and give it to the nearest page (NPC) to deliver to your contact. Keep the contents of the note a secret. In 20 minutes, you may go inquire with a page to receive the scroll. Once you have it, open "An old, fragile scroll (661)" and turn to page 7.

This is it. This innocuous seeming scroll is a letter from prince Onyx, to his sister, princess Jade. It expresses his deep regret that their rescue could not have come early enough to save Jade from conceiving Neptune's child. You now have proof that Atlantica started the war by kidnapping princess Jade. Use this information to prevent any treaty from being signed.

Gladius said something that reminds you of some of your own research. Return to your quarters and look through your documents until you find the name of the plateau south east of the Tasmanian Sea. Once you know it's name, turn to page 5.

Well, you have a name now. All you need are coordinates. Where could you find a map? Pacifica has never been on good terms with India and so has very few maps. The Explorer's Guild of Atlantica might have better maps. Get into the Explorer's Guild and take a Map of India (631). (You may take a map of your choice from the "A Big, Disorderly Pile of Maps" sign) Then, turn to page 6.

Things are falling into place. Next you will need something to power the mirror with, aside from your own magic. Acquire an Electric Eel's Hunter's Organ (600). Once you have it, turn to page 7.

Now that you know where to scry, and how you will power the mirror, you just need access to Cassandra's Mirror (145). Either persuade King Triton, or whoever else is ruling Atlantica at the moment, to let you borrow it, or follow the directions on "Cassandra's Mirror" to break in and take the mirror. Once you are in possession of Cassandra's Mirror (145) turn to page 8.

Acquire some Runic Chalk (828) and trace the "Runic Circle". This action activates the circle and prepares it to support a magician through a difficult spell. If the circle is already chalked, you must first remove the old chalk.

Once you have prepared the circle, spend 2 minutes meditating undisturbed (this action is interruptible) in the middle of the circle to scry in the mirror. Once you have finished meditating, open Cassandra's Mirror (145) and turn to page 9

This is finally what you need to convince Triton and Jared! Hurry and do so before it is too late. You must persuade them to include a military alliance in the treaty!
